

I have secondhand knowledge

 reddit.com/r/aliens/comments/18cgurv/i_have_secondhand_knowledge

2.1k

Posted by u/alesneolith
28 days ago

Discussion

Introduction

Please note that I will be vague in some places about any identifying information, credentials, locations, people, procedures, etc. I don't want to be identified and harassed.

I have a professional background in anthropology. I also have some informal experience in philosophy, which unexpectedly ended up being the most useful of my skills on this project. Previously, I worked for a university in the western United States. For cultural reasons, students and faculty at this particular university are more likely to be selected for sensitive government work. I suspect that I was selected because of my low profile, my squeaky clean history, a lack of any drug or alcohol use, my broad range of skills and knowledge related to human civilization, and some connections that I have in academia. My most significant work has been in ethnography and cultural anthropology.

Why Reddit?

I'm sure you're wondering why I am posting this here instead of sending this information somewhere more important. Since the UAP hearing happened and other whistleblowers have come forward, I felt safe enough to speak out privately. I don't know how useful my testimony was, and I felt like I was brushed off. As I'll get into later, I don't have any documents to hand over or any firsthand experience with UFOs or ETs. I do have trust in our institutions to do their job, come to the right conclusions, and eventually begin disclosure. I have a hope that the truth will be widely known in the near future.

I wasn't interested in or involved in the UFO/alien phenomenon prior to starting my work. As the work progressed, I became convinced that there was something very real behind all of this, and now that I'm released from the project, UFOlogy has become a special interest of mine. I think now is a good time to put my story out there.

The Work

In early 2017, I was contacted by one of my connections at the university, who urged me to apply for a position in a 'special research project,' claiming that the project needed someone with my experience, the pay would be good, and that they would help me get in. This individual helped me apply and gave me a rundown about what to expect from the hiring process. This process involved an extensive background check, applying for a security clearance, several interviews, and training for security, communication, and working with sensitive information. Going through the ratmaze took several months, but I made it through much faster than anticipated and was finally ready to actually begin working in early 2018.

I was apprehensive on my first day of work. I had jumped through all the hoops, and I still didn't know what the subject of the research was. I didn't feel comfortable with all the security. (I'm on the spectrum, and while I'm good at masking, procedures and bureaucracy make me confused and nervous.) The workday began by entering a secure facility where my identity was verified with ID and biometrics. After passing through, I would go to my workplace and have to pass through another layer of security. In the workspace we were monitored constantly and subject to random security checks.

The workspace was a medium-sized set of offices where I and six other researchers worked, one of which was assigned to train me. Each of these researchers had different backgrounds and were assigned to a different part of the project.

Over the next few days, my trainer walked me through the research process. It was then when I finally learned what the subject of the research was. My trainer gently explained that we were working with information about an 'exotic intelligence,' meaning a sapient non-human species of an unknown origin. Our job was to take the information that had been provided for us from outside sources, sort it based on its content and usefulness, and in the end produce a comprehensive report that summarized what we know about this intelligence, with a special focus on its motivations and intentions. This report could then be used to brief elected officials in the future, and even the public. We were allowed to make certain assumptions in the report, such as that these beings and their motivations could be understood by humans and that the information we have is accurate.

I had endless questions and became distraught, and I think they could tell because my trainer figured it would be best if I was given time to myself to read some of the material and digest the information. As I learned more, the shock faded and my fear was replaced with curiosity.

A lot of the work wouldn't be very interesting to the members of this sub. The average workday consisted of going through security, getting permission to retrieve certain documents, then organizing and annotating the documents. Much of the documents were only related to the subject in tangential ways and didn't convey very much of use. In a sense, we were separating the wheat from the chaff and getting the material ready to be used for the project. After finishing, we would secure the workplace and leave. Over the months that followed, we slowly built up a corpus of useful information.

I obviously do not have the report with me, and it has been a while, but I will now relate to you the most important information that I can recall related to these beings. Feel free to ask questions. Note that I worked the most on information related to their society and motivations.

Origins

We know more about every other aspect of these beings than we do about where they actually come from. We do have some tentative ideas and speculation, but multiple hypotheses are still on the table. As I'll get into later, there is good evidence that life on earth and these beings share a common ancestor. Our job is to keep an open mind and let the evidence lead the way instead of falling for our own pet theories or cultural prejudice. The extraterrestrial hypothesis makes some sense but it's not the only option. During work, my colleagues often called them 'aliens' or 'ETs.'

In the interviews I've read, the interview subjects are vague, absurd, contradictory, or evasive when asked about their origins. Perhaps this is because we aren't in a position to understand where they come from, or perhaps there are problems with communication. Maybe they simply don't want us to know.

Appearance and Biology

In regards to the appearance of the ETs, UFO mythology is dead on.

Generally, they look like diminutive humanoids with large heads, reduced facial features, and very large eyes, which are sometimes covered in a transparent black film. (Earlier specimens usually do not have the film, later specimens do.) Their average height is ~5 feet tall. They have two long arms and two legs. They have three long fingers and an opposable thumb. They have feet with four toes. They may have fingernails and toenails, but not always. When they do, they are mottled and dark. They have no reproductive organs or anus, and they secrete waste through their skin, similar to how we sweat. They ingest liquid food just like we do. They wear clothing, usually in the form of a very thin blue or gray high-collared garment, as well as boots.

Their heads are large, as mentioned before. In some individuals there are pronounced ridges on the head and upper back, which seem to relate to different kinds of implants in a way that is not understood. As far as we can tell, every individual has an artificial lattice woven through their brain and nervous system. I'll get into that later.

No two individuals look exactly alike. Head shape, eye shape and size, the patterns and protrusion of the ridges, and skin color vary between individuals.

Life on earth and the ETs share the same kind of biochemistry. They are made of cells, use DNA, proteins, etc. They can be studied and understood with the same principles that we use to study life on earth. This has fed into speculation about their origins. The most conservative hypothesis is that they share our biochemistry because they also originate from earth, but there are other theories. Life on Earth and wherever they come from could both be descended from a common ancestor. Perhaps life everywhere in the universe shares the same biochemistry.

The striking similarities between their anatomy and human anatomy leads me to wild speculation about whether the individuals we see are specifically designed to resemble humans in order to facilitate interaction. There is a small collection of biological material that has been retrieved from craft that shares no resemblance to humans and defies description. This material is like a web of nervous tissue which is interlaced into the structure of the craft itself.

Technology

Before, I mentioned an artificial lattice which is integrated into the nervous system. This lattice is at the heart of their technology. In interviews with subjects, they demonstrated the ability to communicate with and detect the presence of others of their kind in the same facility, in different rooms. Tools retrieved from craft would be responsive to the touch and intentions of the ETs but would be totally inert in the hands of human operators. This lattice is probably what makes these abilities possible. It is made of ordinary elements like copper and aluminum, and there is no discernable reason why it should be able to do what it seems to do.

We were allowed access to documents that described the capabilities of their craft as well as eyewitness encounters, but we were not allowed any data that would explain how their propulsion systems work or about anything regarding the reverse-engineering of craft. The reasoning behind this is obvious. The special interests involved have begrudgingly begun to accept that disclosing the existence of the intelligence is necessary over the long term, but the one thing they refuse to do is relinquish their monopoly over exotic technology. I don't have much insight to give about the craft because the project focused more on the extraterrestrials themselves, their society, and implications for our society.

The craft have a wide range of appearance, size, and behavior. It seems like each craft is designed for a specific purpose. Every craft is different, but they can be grouped based on shape and purpose. There are some edge cases that won't fit into this neat categorization.

There are hundreds of objects in orbit that are likely created by this intelligence. At first glance, they look like commonplace space debris, but on rare occasions they will move in a way that is not attributable to gravity, meet with another object, or expel an object. Tracking these is very difficult, and we know very little about them, including their size.

The most commonly seen objects are large reflective orbs or pills that move at high speeds. Usually they are only seen for a second, but on other occasions they follow aircraft, hover over sensitive locations, move in strange, illogical ways, and even suddenly disappear. At night these orbs sometimes emit orange light, although other colors can also be seen. These objects have been seen submerging into the ocean as well as other bodies of water.

There are egg-shaped craft which move in more predictable ways, although they move much faster than man-made aircraft. We were allowed to have a lot of information related to these. These craft are the most likely to fail, and they are manned. Biological material and even living organisms have been recovered from these craft. These are the most interesting to me, as they contain occupants, living spaces, and large rooms full of equipment. We speculate that these are surveyors or scientists. In one particular case, a craft of this kind contained samples of earth biota. There are no control panels or any kind of obvious mechanism for controlling the craft. This kind of craft has unfortunately become more uncommon over time.

The classic flying discs and crescents have the greatest presence in popular culture but they are not the most common object. These are speculated to be stealth vehicles that are used for reconnaissance and research. On many occasions these have landed, completely empty.

The Interviews

Because of my past work experience, most of my work on the report was related to actual interviews that had taken place with ETs. They were retrieved from crashes but also from landings, where the craft seemed to have landed on purpose and the beings came voluntarily. Reading these was very surreal, and I suspect the context of these interviews is part of the reason for so much secrecy. The way that they were treated was inhumane and very unethical.

The ETs have a very close relationship with their technology. They cannot survive very long while separated from their craft and from each other. They can't eat anything other than a special kind of liquid food, and human-made substitutes were not sufficient replacements. Throughout their stay on Earth, they would suffer from malnutrition and a kind of toxic buildup in the body. Because of how valuable they were, every effort was taken to keep them alive and conscious, even against their wishes. The situation reminded me of the case of Hisashi Ouchi.

Something that deeply frustrated me was that they seemed to want to show us so much more, but because of the irresponsible behavior of the program, they could not. They were separated from their craft permanently so the craft could be hauled off elsewhere and auctioned off, and so that the program would have total control over the interview process. Because of this separation, the ETs would slowly die.

Communication took place through telepathy. They can read our thoughts and 'send' thoughts and impressions into our minds. However, this takes a lot of concentration on the part of the interviewer and communication would break down as the health and consciousness of the subject declined. The interviewer and the ET would communicate telepathically, then the interviewer would say the exchange out loud for it to be recorded.

Society & Motivations

From reading interviews with detained subjects, I and other researchers were able to put together a rough picture of how this species works and why they are here. Instead of having any kind of formal social structure, these beings form a dynamic superintelligence that is a composite of all of their minds. Reproduction doesn't take place biologically, instead they are artificially created, with each one designed for a specific purpose as their society has need. The intimate interlinking of their minds causes them to behave as one superorganism rather than individuals.

To get into why they are here, we have to understand their philosophy. 'Philosophy' is a human word made for human contexts, so it may not be appropriate to use that label, but I will use it anyway. They have a monistic, reductionist ontology which bears heavy similarities to cosmopsychism or objective idealism. As far as I can tell, their philosophy is naturalistic but has some elements that could be misconstrued as religious. They reduce time, space, and everything to the behavior of a single unitary consciousness. (Not to be confused with the superintelligence that I mentioned earlier.) This consciousness behaves entirely spontaneously, without deliberation or forethought.

According to them, the minds of living organisms are parts of this consciousness that has 'looped in' on itself, creating separation and individuality. The process of evolution has caused some organisms (such as ourselves) to develop higher cognitive faculties and mental complexity which allows for complex thought and self-reflection.

Our perceptions are the mental activity of this unitary consciousness as it is filtered through our minds and presented in a way that is most advantageous to our survival as individual 'loops'. We model the patterns of our observations as the laws of physics, but the laws of physics have no inherent existence except as the patterns of this universal mental activity.

They believe that as life continues to grow and complexify, it will have an effect on the unitary consciousness that constitutes the universe. As life proliferates and complexifies, it will cause it to attain higher cognitive functions and eventually reach self-awareness. They believe that the universe is already blindly striving toward self-awareness and complexity, and they seek 'move it along,' so to speak. This is their goal, and it's presumably why they are here on earth. They are guiding the development of life on this planet to help serve this end. I have no clue why they are so motivated to move toward this goal or what the actual implications would be if they succeeded. It also leads to other questions. If any of this is true, time itself is merely a construct created by this unitary consciousness, so how could it change and develop? How does this universal consciousness fragment into individual minds, and what relationship does this have to biology and the origin of life?

They are not afraid of dying because they believe that death is just a process where individuality breaks down and the mind 'unloops' and becomes reintegrated into the unitary consciousness. They believe that memories and life experiences are reabsorbed into the consciousness during this process, perhaps this is the mechanism that allows it to develop. Whether or not this is true, it seemed to bring them a lot of peace during their tormented final moments. Even in death, they served their purpose.

Their philosophy shapes the way their society is organized in profound ways. They have intentionally designed their technology in a way that integrates the mind and obscures individuality. They do not fear death, and even embrace it when they have fulfilled their purpose. They have a positive attitude toward living organisms and ecosystems, because the flourishing of life is integral to them achieving their goals. However, they do not respect individuality and they see individuals (including themselves) and species as expendable in the service of their goals. In the interviews, they voiced concern with the impact that humanity is having on life on this planet but also see us as a step in a process of complexification. They are definitely monitoring how life is developing on this planet, and it is very probable that they are subtly manipulating it to serve their goals. The similarity between their biology and ours makes me wonder whether they seeded earth with life to begin with. Maybe this planet has been their project from the beginning.

My thoughts on disclosure

I've been keeping up with this topic for a while now and despite recent events, I feel very optimistic about disclosure. This isn't the kind of thing that can be kept a secret forever. They are here to stay, and a secret this large can only be kept for so long. None of the information (At least none that I learned during the project) is anything that would threaten civilization or cause a mass panic, people are much more resilient than that. The cat is clawing its way out of the bag, and I don't think it's going to be forced back in without tremendous effort. The important thing is that ordinary people like you keep putting up resistance and support whistleblowers. I hope that the report I helped to write eventually gets out to the public, me and my coworkers put a lot of effort into writing it.

777 comments

level 1

Real or not. Glad to hear that nothing you were involved with would make you think that civilization is threatened.

Real or not. Bummed to hear that they were treated poorly.

278

6 more replies

3 more replies

level 1

"Previously, I worked for a university in the western United States. For cultural reasons, students and faculty at this particular university are more likely to be selected for sensitive government work."

90% this is BYU in Utah. Mormons are over-represented in the MIC and security clearances, because they generally don't drink/do drugs, have strong sensitivity to taboo, social stigma and can't be blackmailed easily. And the UAP phenomenon aligns with the "many worlds" mormon philosophy. And they often have families, which are useful collateral.

edit to add: VICE NEWS, 2020: "UFO Subreddit Was Subject to Systemic Censorship:

The moderators of Reddit's UFO community automatically censored posts referring to 'Brazil,' 'Navy,' and 'Pentagon.' "

391

level 2

Comment deleted by user · 27 days ago

8 more replies

level 1

Can the mods chime in and give some explanation why the OP account has been suspended?

Edit: I reached out to the mods and they replied that OP deleted their account. I'm not sure if this is the case though since it shows that the user has been "suspended" when I click on the profile.

204

3 more replies

level 2

jforrest1980

· 27 days ago

This group owns every major media outlet on Earth, and has trillions of our tax dollars. I would be a fool to believe r/aliens hasn't been compromised for many years.

72

level 3

Mathfanforpresident

· 27 days ago

I have had some post remove from the UFO subreddit when talking about the galactic federation. They told me it's because it didn't involve UFOs but it literally talks about a ship called the alliance spacecraft. either way I was banned for a month after explaining my position and then posting it again. The UFO subreddit has fallen to infiltrators. I'm 100% convinced after reading this.

VICE NEWS, 2020: "UFO Subreddit Was Subject to Systemic Censorship:

thank you nicobackfromthedeath4 for showing this article

30

4 more replies

1 more reply

2 more replies

level 4

probably talking about the ebo scientist. here's the link. The account showed up exactly like the account in question (u/alesneolith) It showed his name still, it did not show the u/deleted like it usually does for deleted accounts. But when you click on his name it does the same thing that it does with OPs in question today. It just looks like it has an error when you go to their account. But their account name still shows up.

From the late 2000s to the mid-2010s, I worked as a molecular biologist for a national security contractor in a program to study Exo-Biospheric-Organisms (EB0). I will share with you a lot of information on this subject. Feel free to ask questions or ask for clarification:

edit: strange that ebo scientist edited their post and said "it seems like all my comments are being deleted"

26

1 more reply

2 more replies

level 2

WHATYEAHOK

· 27 days ago

Probably not. Mods can't perform account-level actions like that. They can only ban you from their own subreddit, delete your posts in their subreddit, etc.

The site admins, employed by reddit, are the ones who are responsible for his suspension.

21

1 more reply

7 more replies

level 1

This might explain why Leslie Kean and others have become interested in near death stuff now from their UAP investigations?

This 'cosmology' seems to be floating around in a few stories, matches the famous "bioscience" whistle blower as well.. more positive than some others like the insidious "soul recycler" ect ..

Some questions I would have — are you aware of any other alien species and what are their role in this? It seems Grusch and others have referenced multiple such visitors..

This is all high concept quasi religious stuff. But are there no finer details? How long do they live? What is life like in the shared consciousness between “individuals”? Why do they want to tell us about the meaning of existence but not even what planet or where they are from?

67

level 2

King_Cah02

· 27 days ago

Some questions I would have — are you aware of any other alien species and what are their role in this? It seems Grusch and others have referenced multiple such visitors..

I am not OP but I doubt they would have knowledge of other species as different SAPs and CIA Projects handle different aspects of the Phenomenon. These gray guys are only one of the types of NHIs that exist on and/or near this planet right now. Grusch was only able to come to the conclusion that there are multiple sources of the UAP Phenomenon due to him knowing so many different people who were active within these separate SAPs. Some deal with ETs, others deal with UAPs, a few most likely deal directly with UTs (Ultra-Terrestrials), the occult and mysticism directly in order to get some UAPs to run in the first place. Very interesting stuff, horrible that the UAPDA was practically ripped apart right in front of our faces.

29

1 more reply

level 1

hftb_and_pftw

· 28 days ago

To your knowledge, is the CE5 phenomenon real? Is it really possible for ordinary citizens to make contact through thought alone? And if so, what are the parameters or process that are most likely to lead to success?

Do you have any further insight as to why they hide themselves from us? Are they wanting disclosure as much as we are?

I'm sure that posting this was not an easy thing to do, so thank you.

131

level 2

Thanks for your kind response.

I don't know about the CE5 phenomenon itself, but our visitors definitely have the ability to manipulate and interact with the human mind, as I stated from the interview. Interviewers needed to become sensitive and concentrate in order to communicate with the extraterrestrials. If they wanted to communicate, they could.

131

level 3

fleshspacesuit

· 27 days ago

When I was reading your report, it oddly sounds like we are consciousness inside some other beings brain, and these "aliens" are genetics in this being making sure consciousness grows like it is supposed to, especially if we understand consciousness as something different than pure biology. We are the being becoming conscious of itself, much like we do as an adolescent, and the "aliens" are the DNA of the being making sure these processes take place.

64

level 5

I also love this comment and thought of a very similar take in 7th grade regarding cells and if they're judged by "god" on their individual soul/consciousness (debating/questioning Christianity ideologies of judgement day/death) lol

8

1 more reply

4 more replies

level 4

lolihull

· 27 days ago

What were your conversations like if you don't mind me asking?

Were they cold towards you because they don't like individuality or interested in you because of the wider single consciousness goal?

13

2 more replies

2 more replies

1 more reply

level 1

AngrySuperArdvark

· 27 days ago

Just in case this is true and one of these aliens are reading this, i do not support the way your kind was treated on this planet, most of us don't and please don't wipe us out we had no idea this was happening. We do however give our full support for you to wipe out the people who did that to them.

306

level 2

JigglyEyeballs

· 27 days ago

Given their philosophy described here (and what was said here is very similar to something that was posted a while back, similar stuff was said) I doubt they'd be that petty.

It would be like us nuking that island with the primitive tribe on it because they throw spears when they see our ships or helicopters.

39

level 3

[deleted]

· 27 days ago

I hope if this is true there is a vigil for those interstellar folks who crashed here to teach us a thing or two. Brave as hell to come here on their own and not even use any weapons, knowing they were outnumbered. I could devote my life to being the custodian to that testament.

11

5 more replies

1 more reply

1 more reply

level 2

rosetta11

· 27 days ago

level 2

Affectionate-Ad-6962

· 27 days ago

level 2

no1928u9

· 27 days ago

level 2

Dio_Majeh

· 27 days ago

level 2

Similar-Guitar-6

· 27 days ago

This is the correct answer. ❤️

9

level 3

OnTheSlope

· 27 days ago

Did neither of you read the post?

Supposedly individuality is meaningless to them and individuals are expendable.

The suffering of an individual is irrelevant as long as it has no significant impact on their end goal.

19

level 4

YouCanLookItUp

· 27 days ago

level 4

Dio Majeh

· 27 days ago

1 more reply

1 more reply

13 more replies

level 1

Rumpkins

· 27 days ago

What a crazy write up. Even if there is only a 20% chance that this is true, that's a wild 20%

53

level 2

AndWereAllVeryTired

· 27 days ago

level 2

Toast2099

· 26 days ago

0%

6

level 2

PsyAlienNirvana

· 27 days ago

20%? 0,000000002% maybe.....

5

level 1

Bodson94

· 27 days ago

level 1

anty328

· 27 days ago

Thanks for the story. I have a few questions though.

- When describing them, you seem to strive away from calling them a Hive Mind. Is there a reason for that?
- You assume one of the reasons the Gov is keeping quiet on the topic is because of how aliens were treated inhumanly. You then go on to describe a race of beings that don't seem to care about individuality and have superior technology. Could the reason for their inhuman treatment was due to prior inhuman encounters with the civilian population, abductions etc?
- And I know people will hate that I'm asking this but from your opinion. If our race doesn't want to be part of their cosmic religion, what would you expect to be the outcome if we resisted?

level 2

alesneolith

Op · 27 days ago · edited 27 days ago

1. I don't call them a hive mind because in fiction, the hive mind usually has a top-down association. There's a leader of the hive that imposes its will on its minions. This is different, and I think it would be insulting to refer to them as a hive mind. They still have individual minds, they are just deeply connected to each other and to their technology.
2. They don't care about individuality the way we do, but they are not overtly malicious as far as I can tell. The inhumane treatment of the extraterrestrials was because of hubris and greed. The first priority is to get the craft hauled off to be studied. The extraterrestrials are separated from their craft over long periods, which causes them to suffer. That being said, I do think that abductions happen. They study all life on this planet, and that includes us. But I don't think the cruelty toward our visitors was borne from vengeance.
3. I don't think they care to convert us to their philosophy. All that they care about is for life on this planet to keep proliferating and moving forward. If we become a barrier to this goal, they will intervene. They prefer to take the subtle approach, but if we become a bigger problem for them they might have take a more direct approach.

145

level 3

supersecretkgbfile

· 27 days ago

So the aliens are communists... LETS FUCKING GOOOO!!!!

via GIPHY

57

level 4

Shoogazi

· 27 days ago

Fully automated luxury gay space communism was real the whole time!

11

3 more replies

level 3

anty328

· 27 days ago

Interesting take.

Respectfully, it does worry me that you express that there are deep cultural differences between us and them but they are still entirely benevolent? It seems a little unrealistic, that or you're looking at them through rose tinted glasses since you've studied them for so long.

It just doesn't seem consistent to me. Maybe it's because I'm still seeing them through a human lens but differences create friction between factions and that's something we see even in the animal kingdom so I don't exactly exclude that war gene to just humanity, all living things challenge each other.

I guess that sorta leads me to this, do you think after all the fancy tech and interconnected telepathic links, would you still call them living? You said they manufactured and design their offspring, would you still consider them living or machine?

20

level 4

JigglyEyeballs

· 27 days ago · edited 27 days ago

I think they're benevolent in the same way that we're generally benevolent to animals in the sense that we'd prefer animals to be treated humanely, so long as they aren't a nuisance, and if we do need to experiment on them we try to not inflict too much suffering.

We are not a threat to them in the whole. A single shark can hurt an individual person, but as a species sharks pose no threat to humans. We can potentially potentially down an individual craft, but we pose no risk to their civilisation.

We're a complex species, which makes us interesting to them, in the same way that we find primates or dolphins interesting.

We don't really have any reason to want to go around exterminating dolphins or chimps (or most animals for that matter, unless we deem them pests). I think they view us the same way.

I think they're 'benevolent' only in the sense that it makes little sense to exterminate us. It would be like us one day deciding to go and exterminate all butterflies.

17

1 more reply

level 4

Papa_Glucose

· 27 days ago

I don't particularly care for the politics of my pet lizard. To be fair. He hates me. Hisses at me sometimes. But I'm gonna keep feeding him and taking care of him.

26

14 more replies

6 more replies

level 3

OwnFreeWill2064

· 27 days ago

3. Like a hybridization project so they don't have to wipe us out vis a vis we don't wipe out life here.

3

level 4

nogumz

· 26 days ago

17 more replies

level 1

johninbigd

· 27 days ago

level 1

Least_Blacksmith9744

· 27 days ago

Nobody here can verify or debunk this. The overall gist and particularly the borg like aspect of the et's sounds pretty legit to me.

51

level 2

Papa_Glucose

· 27 days ago

It sounds legit, but also I could come up with this with my level of knowledge about the topic.

34

level 3

lolihull

· 27 days ago

If we ever do learn the full truth about this particular species of NHI, there will be so many YouTube videos comparing hoax posts to reality and seeing how many times we got things right :')

19

level 4

AsleepAtTheFeel

· 27 days ago

That is easily going to be one of the most satisfying things following disclosure. Seeing grifters get exposed like that is going to be DELICIOUS.

7

1 more reply

1 more reply

level 1

Pleasant_Pedant

· 27 days ago

level 1

Yesidied

· 28 days ago

Thank you for your post!

Couple questions:

-Do you have any classic ufo mythology pictures of aliens that closely resemble what they look like? (Not an actual photo but one from lore most similar)

-You mentioned they just landed in some cases, where and why these locations? are these specific or just relevant to their duties- ie landing to study for example

-Possible to guess how many are interacting with earth in any given day?

-Any mention of Nuclear? I know our lore shows the ET/visitors seem most curious with nuclear power so didnt know if this was mentioned by them or us to them.

46

level 2

alesneolith

Op · 27 days ago

1. I did not see any photos of bodies, but I did see diagrams and illustrations of what they look like. I'll try to find a picture that closely resembles what I saw and get back to you. One thing to keep in mind is that their appearance varies from individual to individual. Here's something to look out for if someone claims to leak photos. I would think the photos are more likely real if they show the ridges on the head and spine, that part of their anatomy doesn't seem to have widely diffused into pop culture.
2. The locations seem to be relevant to their duties. Some common places are nuclear testing sites, irradiated areas, areas with high biodiversity, areas with industrial contaminants, agricultural areas, feedlots, etc.
3. I don't know that one, and it would depend on how you define interaction.
4. They are definitely concerned with nuclear weapons. As I mentioned before, they are concerned with the impact that humanity is having on life on this planet. If we had a nuclear war, a lot of damage would be done that would set their project back.

95

level 3

BrainFukler

· 27 days ago

Regarding point 1): Can you specify on the pupils/irises/eyes described, without the black film?

14

level 4

lolihull

· 27 days ago

I can't remember where I saw it but a few weeks ago I found a picture someone had made using AI of a classic grey but with human eyes - iris, pupil, whites etc. It looked comically terrible but i suppose it's likely to be fairly accurate given their other similarities to us.

6

2 more replies

1 more reply

6 more replies

level 1

Okay, what the fuck.

My thoughts:

1. You're obviously intelligent. Your level of vocabulary is impressive and you used it correctly.
2. Most of this has been said by others in some form, so you're either an astute follower of this topic and pulled everything together to make your story, or you have real knowledge of this. I'm going to give you the benefit of the doubt.
3. The ETs being concerned about life flourishing on earth lines up with the idea that they're so concerned about nukes. Nukes don't only kill humans, they kill all life within a radius.
4. Could you expand at all on the unitary consciousness? Specifically this part: "Our perceptions are the mental activity of this unitary consciousness as it is filtered through our minds" Is their idea that when we die we will be looped into the same consciousness as them? How does that work exactly and what level of cognition do living things maintain after death?
5. Would you be willing to speak to Ross Coulthart, Garry Nolan, or David Grusch? People like you need to connect with these people to help each other fill in any knowledge gaps. Everyone would massively appreciate it. They may be able to direct you to an Inspector General as well.

Thank you for posting this. Super intriguing. It's unfathomably, relentlessly frustrating that we have so many whistleblowers and zero confirmation from the gov't. I want to see the damn bodies.

21

3 more replies

level 1

downunderplus61

· 27 days ago

You mentioned UFOs are auctioned off, did you mean something else by that or are various businesses competing for these vehicles? Does it go to the highest dollar bidder, the highest profit share of intellectual property or the company most likely to crack the code with the best personnel for that craft type? Or some other criteria?

35

level 2

When I said 'auctioned off' I was being a little hyperbolic. I don't know that much about the process of how craft are handled and studied but I'm sure it's a political process. The main point is that the extraterrestrials are separated from the craft, which causes their condition to deteriorate. Most of the interview subjects were from landings, not crashes.

65

level 2

JagsOnlySurfHawaii

· 27 days ago

Have you seen Jurassic Park Dominion yet. I said it before here a while back that, that is exactly what is happening to the recovered UAP. Shit goes to the highest bidder.

18

1 more reply

level 1

AngrySuperArdvark

· 27 days ago

Have you any information about how the beings reacted to the way the researchers treated them? Did they get angry, did they swear revenge, were they sad all the time? I wouldn't judge them.

16

3 more replies

1 more reply

level 1

KaleidoscopeThis5159

· 27 days ago

I'm going to make a logical leap here, based on reports from other sources and my own research.

The artificial lattice is copper and silver [like another alien that has been reviewed] and possibly has an altered crystal lattice, making it "super conductive" [or something like that] so it doesn't heat up when electrical currents flow through it. (Pretty important for something under your skin)

11

4 more replies

level 1

PsyAlienNirvana

· 27 days ago

There is no way that there is even a remote possibility that you would spread information like that publicly on the internet. If someone published top secret information of this caliber on Reddit they would certainly end up very badly. I can't understand how people can believe you and in any case these are attitudes that keep us away from a serious awareness on the subject. I saw a UFO up close, at a distance of just a few meters, something that definitely CANNOT be human technology, it just didn't make sense according to our physics, I know they exist, against all reasonable doubt, so I find it very important that we start having a more serious attitude towards them , because I, like many others, have seen them seriously and it is clear that we are being observed by one or more more advanced civilizations and it is time to address the topic properly and stop with misleading stories.

13

level 2

Well, the thing is that all of this is extremely compartmentalized. I know that from personal experience. There's no universe where someone who is an anthropologist is sat at a cubicle and handed all documentation on any one facet of this. Nor would it be disseminated in such a casual fashion afterward. If you had a clearance, you'd know how carefully you have to approach every aspect of life as a result.

These stories, as fun as they are, do not help in our quest for answers. They fill the void with misinformation and temper the desire to know the truth.

10

2 more replies

level 2

antiqua_lumina

· 27 days ago

You don't need two spaces. That was a convention for typewriters. Word processors can pad the space automatically. It's a terrible sin to do two spaces on a computer.

12

2 more replies

5 more replies

level 1

Kavinski

· 27 days ago

There are a few possibilities for how a copper and aluminum lattice integrated into the nervous system could theoretically enable telekinetic abilities:

Amplification of neural signals: The lattice could act as a kind of signal booster, amplifying the electrical signals in the nervous system to allow the brain to send stronger outputs to muscles. This amplification could allow precise control over muscle groups to manipulate objects from a distance.

Electromagnetic field manipulation: The lattice may interact with the bioelectric fields produced by the nervous system to manipulate external electromagnetic fields in the environment. Changing EM field strength/patterns finely enough could allow exertion of force on objects remotely.

Quantum entanglement: The lattice materials could become quantum entangled with external objects. Manipulating the quantum state of the lattice could then instantly affect entangled objects through quantum correlations. This could allow movement of objects without physical touch.

Consciousness focusing: If consciousness has subtle but real effects on quantum systems (per theories of quantum cognition/consciousness), the lattice could help concentrate and direct consciousness toward intended outcomes. Focused consciousness could then bias the probability of objects moving in certain directions.

Reality alteration: The lattice might enable manipulation of a holographic or simulation-based reality, allowing imagined changes in objects/locations to be actualized. This would be the deepest explanation but requires a non-materialist understanding of existence itself.

Of course, the mechanisms behind any putative telekinetic abilities remain highly speculative. More research would be needed to reveal if quantum processes may in fact underlie such anomalous mental influences. The lattice may enable something further from our current scientific understanding altogether.

36

4 more replies

level 1

[deleted]

· 27 days ago

What does a society based on individualism do to the unitary unconscious once they pass? Very interesting, thank you so much for posting.

9

level 1

Rachemsachem

· 27 days ago

I deleted a kinda entitled comment complaining that you didn't write more. Sorry it's just incredibly frustrating, like getting a whiff of bread from the bakery while your outside starving.. ...please consider writing in more detail.

14

level 2

That's a more complicated question that it seems at first.

'Male and Female' is how the sexual divide in humanity works. The extraterrestrials reproduce artificially, so there are no genders or reproductive organs. That being said, you could group them based on their different appearances, (for example, the pattern and shape of the ridges.) there are different 'archetypes,' so to speak.

56

2 more replies

level 1

pagla07

· 26 days ago

This post is suspiciously similar to one made by a Molecular Biologist who also disappeared after making a very detailed about things they worked on in a secret program. This post is organized in almost exactly same way and discusses very similar subject matter just without a lot of the technical details in the prior post.

https://www.reddit.com/r/aliens/comments/14rp7w9/from_the_late_2000s_to_the_mid2010s_i_worked_as_a/

6

level 1

I'm not accusing OP of lying, but if you're familiar with the 4chan whistleblower and the alien biologist post from a few months ago you'll see a lot of the same stuff in this but combined together. That either makes this a corroboration of that data or a LARP combining other LARPs. Gotta love Ufology.

43